Policies for Stabilization and Growth in Small Very Open Economies

DeLisle Worrell

Group of Thirty, Washington, DC

Occasional Paper 85

30

About the Author

Dr. DeLisle Worrell was appointed Governor of the Central Bank of Barbados in November 2009. Previously, he served as Executive Director of the Caribbean Centre for Money and Finance (2008–2009) and worked with the International Monetary Fund in the Monetary and Capital Markets Department (1998–2008). Dr. Worrell served as Deputy Governor of the Central Bank of Barbados (1990–1998) and as the bank's Manager of the Research Department and Divisional Director of Research and Information (1973–1990).

He is the author of the book, Small Island Economies*, and has also published articles on money, banking, exchange rates, and economic modeling and forecasting, in books and journals in the United States, the United Kingdom, Mexico, and the Caribbean. Dr. Worrell has held fellowships at the Smithsonian Institution, the Peterson Institute, the Federal Reserve Board in Washington, Yale University, Princeton University, and the University of the West Indies.*

ISBN 1-56708-158-4
Copies of this paper are available for $10 from:
The Group of Thirty
1726 M Street, N.W., Suite 200
Washington, D.C. 20036
Tel.: (202) 331-2472
E-mail: info@group30.org, www.group30.org

Occasional Paper
No. 85

Policies for Stabilization and Growth in Small Very Open Economies

DeLisle Worrell

Published by
Group of Thirty
Washington, D.C.
2012

Contents

Introduction 5

Relevant Factors 7

Openness is structural and the foreign exchange constraint is hard 7

Monetary policy and the exchange rate 8

Fiscal sustainability and debt management 10

Competitiveness and growth 12

Competitiveness for SVOEs is not about relative prices 13

Small states are different 13

Conclusion 15

Group of Thirty Members 2012 17

Group of Thirty Publications since 1990 23

Introduction

Small very open economies are different from large economies, in that they face a foreign exchange constraint that cannot be alleviated by depreciation of the real exchange rate or by other policies. This constraint affects monetary, fiscal, and exchange rate policy; fiscal sustainability and debt management; and patterns of economic growth. With respect to monetary/fiscal/exchange rate policy, the most accessible framework for such economies is an exchange rate anchor, where the foreign currency market is balanced by managing aggregate demand, using fiscal policy. With respect to debt, the most sensitive indicators of fiscal sustainability are the ratio of external debt service to foreign earnings, and the rollover risk on foreign currency loans. With respect to growth, expansion in the small open economy is sustainable only if led by the sectors that earn or save foreign exchange. This paper explains these concepts.

It is widely recognized that small states are very heavily impacted by the volatility of international prices of commodities, and by uncertainties in international financial markets. What needs to be better appreciated, however, is that such countries have very limited potential to substitute for imports as a way of reducing their external vulnerability.[1] Moreover, small economies with modern banking systems that are widely accessible, and that are hosts to regional and international conglomerates, do not have an option to close the capital and financial account. This is true even where local securities markets do not exist or are of trivial importance, because the bulk of cross-border finance is motivated by nonprice considerations, and all economic agents, both firms and households, have alternatives to the banking system for effecting cross-border transfers. These avenues include transfer pricing, offsetting transactions, the use of trade credit rather than domestic financing for working capital needs, exchange of services in kind, and informal transfers. These transactions are motivated by interest rate differentials, relative country risk premiums, and other factors more difficult to measure, such as the credibility of official policy.

1 Except possibly for subsistence economies.

The openness of small states, what I refer to as small very open economies (SVOEs), is therefore structural, and may not be ameliorated by policy or strategy of any kind. There is a hard foreign exchange constraint that conditions all economic policy, whether for short-term economic stabilization or for medium-to-long-term sustainable growth. The SVOE is an economic engine that runs on foreign exchange; in the short run it must conserve what is available, and in the medium and long run the economy accelerates as the inflow of foreign exchange increases.

This paper will argue that the simplest and most effective policy for stabilization of small emerging market economies is to anchor a market-determined exchange rate,[2] by means of adjusting aggregate demand, using fiscal policy. Furthermore, sustained growth in the very open economy must be led by the sectors that earn or save foreign exchange. These are the sectors that produce tradable goods, which may be sold at the ruling internationally competitive prices on world markets. Because economies of scale are universal (in marketing, transport, financing, and so forth), small economies find that they must concentrate available human and material resources in only a few tradables, in which they may attain sufficient scale to be internationally competitive. Growth is sustainable when the surplus of foreign exchange earned or saved in the tradable sectors is sufficient to meet the demand from producers of nontradables, and from consumers. What matters for growth prospects is the competitiveness of the tradable sectors; the national competitiveness indexes commonly used are misleading, since they are based on an amalgam of domestic tradable and nontradable prices. Both stabilization policies and growth prospects are therefore constrained by foreign exchange inflows.

---

2 The foreign exchange market is to be viewed as a "fixprice" rather than a "flexiprice" market, in the terminology of Sir John Hicks (see Christopher Bliss, "Sir John Hicks," The New Palgrave Dictionary of Economics, edited by Stephen Durlauf and Lawrence Blume, 2008).

Relevant Factors

Openness is structural and the foreign exchange constraint is hard

The economies under consideration typically have an import propensity of 50 percent or more, and a ratio of foreign exchange income and spending to GDP well in excess of 100 percent.[3] They produce a limited range of exportables, almost all of which are sold abroad at world market prices. In the Caribbean, the list includes tourism, sugar and its by-products, international business and financial services, and, in the case of Trinidad-Tobago, petroleum products. Earnings from exports of goods and services, together with foreign investment and financial inflows, finance imports that reflect the full gamut of modern consumption and investment goods. Because the range of exports is very narrow, and the range of imports very wide, there is very little scope for import substitution. An important policy tool available to large economies is therefore not available to small emerging economies, that is, the ability to boost domestic output at the expense of imports by making imports more expensive, for example by an exchange rate depreciation. What is more, exchange rate depreciation does not necessarily provide an incentive for higher exports, either. The depreciation leaves export prices unchanged in foreign currency terms, and therefore has no immediate effect on the market. Whether there is a later effect depends on the extent to which the domestic producers of exports are able to reduce costs, measured in foreign currency. That, in turn, depends on the extent to which they use domestic rather than imported inputs, and the responsiveness of domestic input and factor prices to the exchange rate depreciation.[4]

3 Adrian Carter, "Economic Size, Openness and Export Diversification: A Statistical Analysis," Central Bank of Barbados Economic Review, December 1997.

The defining characteristic of SVOEs is the foreign exchange constraint, and the fact that this constraint is unaffected by exchange rate changes. This has implications for monetary policy and the exchange rate, for fiscal sustainability and debt management, and for competitiveness and growth strategies.

Monetary policy and the exchange rate

SVOEs need an alternative to inflation or monetary targeting with a flexible exchange rate (the standard recipe for stabilization policy), because both the domestic interest rate and the exchange rate are governed by short-term financial flows.[5] Such an alternative is available in the form of the market-determined exchange rate anchor,[6] managed by containing aggregate spending (and therefore imports) through timely forward-looking fiscal adjustment. In effect, the external accounts are managed by controlling the fiscal contribution to aggregate expenditure. Fiscal targets are derived from a forecast of foreign exchange inflows and the forecast impact of fiscal policy on aggregate expenditure and imports. A continuous monitor of the balance of payments is maintained via the foreign exchange reserves of a central bank, which buys any foreign exchange in excess of the system's needs, and sells on demand, always at the same exchange rate. This continuous monitor is evaluated

4 The responsiveness of wages tends to be the critical factor. There are long-standing controversies as to whether domestic costs will decline sufficiently after a depreciation, and as to the speed and extent of the pass-through from the changes in local currency prices of imports. The literature offers no reason to be confident there are worthwhile cost effects. See, for example, Pascal Towbin and Sebastian Weber, "Limits of Floating Exchange Rates: The Role of Foreign Currency Debt and Import Structure," IMF Working Papers, February 2011, pp. 1–51; Andrew Berg, Eduardo Borensztein, and Paolo Mauro, "An Evaluation of Monetary Policy Regime Options for Latin America," IMF WP/02/211, December 2002; and M. S. Mohanty and Michela Scatigna, "Has Globalisation Reduced Monetary Policy Independence?," BIS Papers, No. 23, May 2005.

5 DeLisle Worrell, "Monetary Policy in Small Open Economies," Central Bank of Barbados Economic Review, 24(2): 13–18 , 1996. This paper concludes that monetary tools such as interest rates and credit limits have temporary effects at best.

6 The choice of anchor will depend on the direction of foreign trade and finance of the SVOE. For most countries, it will be the currency of a dominant neighbor, but countries such as Singapore have used a basket (see Eric Parrado, "Singapore's Unique Monetary Policy: How Does it Work?," IMF WP/04/10, January 2004).

against the year-end target, taking account of seasonalities, and from time to time fiscal adjustments are made as needed.

The advantages of this framework are that the predictability of the exchange rate is highly valued by economic agents, and the ability to keep the rate unchanged over the long term lends credibility to economic policy. Conversely, a history of exchange rate fluctuation often robs economic policy of credibility, even when the policy is well thought out. A second advantage is that the lack of exchange rate volatility has long been known to be a strong incentive to investment.[7] Third, an exchange rate anchor is an effective anti-inflationary policy, because it does not aggravate the effects of imported inflation.[8] The exchange rate is a highly visible target, one that is recognized by everyone, and one whose inflationary consequences are feared by everyone.

Exchange rate targeting was at one time quite popular, and many countries attempted strategies ranging from targeting an unchanged rate to various degrees of floating.[9] What my proposal shares with those strategies is the achievement of the target, in this case an unchanged rate, by means of intervention in the interbank foreign exchange market by the central bank. What is added is the management of aggregate demand via fiscal policy as the means of equilibrating the foreign exchange market, and ensuring that the central bank always has an adequate supply of foreign reserves to support the interbank market at the target exchange rate peg.

This process of foreign exchange market adjustment is shown in the figure below, which plots foreign exchange demand and supply against aggregate domestic spending. The higher is aggregate spending, the higher will be the demand for foreign exchange. In the short run, for reasons just explained, the supply of foreign exchange is invariant to policy. Therefore, if the expected demand for foreign exchange is at point A, aggregate demand must be reduced sufficiently, using fiscal policy, to reduce foreign exchange demand to point B.[10] As a practical

---

7 Robert Pindyck, "Irreversibility, Uncertainty, and Investment," Journal of Economic Literature, 29 (3): 1110–1148, September 1991.

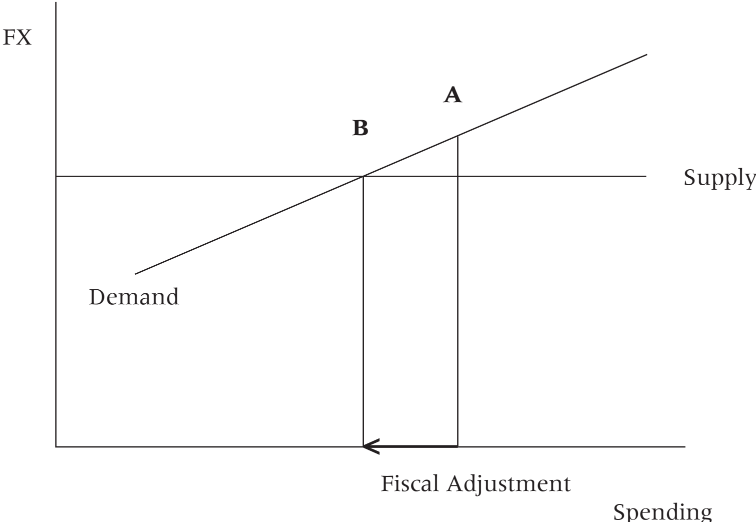
8 In effect, the SVOE may borrow credibility from the anti-inflationary policies of the anchor country.

9 See Carlo Cottarelli and Curzio Giannini, Credibility without Rules? Monetary Frameworks in the Post Bretton Woods Era, IMF, 1997.

10 A model of the impact of fiscal adjustment on aggregate demand appears in Anton Belgrave, Jason LaCorbiniere, Delisle Worrell, and Denisa Applewhaite, "Fiscal Sustainability in an Open Economy with an Exchange Rate Peg," Central Bank of Barbados Economic Review, March 2011. Other frameworks may be used to estimate the impact of fiscal adjustment on aggregate demand and imports. The argument is not model specific.

matter, this means that decisions on fiscal adjustment should be taken well in advance of the expected excess demand, and there should be a robust mechanism of monitoring the external balance and feedback to the policy makers, so that corrections can be made from time to time to keep the foreign exchange market on course.[11]

How to Balance the Demand and Supply of Foreign Exchange (FX)



Fiscal sustainability and debt management

The foreign exchange constraint also informs the way in which the deficit is financed, in particular the extent of foreign currency financing. The servicing of the foreign debt should be kept within limits that foreign exchange market agents consider acceptable, and the maturities of foreign liabilities should be timed to be within the limits of acceptable rollover risk. The government debt profile of the SVOE becomes unsustainable when either of these conditions is violated, even when the fiscal strategy is thought to be sustainable on other grounds.

---

11 A description of the institutional arrangements used in Barbados appears in Delisle Worrell, "Stablisation Policy with a Fixed but Market-determined Exchange Rate," Central Bank of Barbados Economic Review, June 2012).

There are three criteria for judging the sustainability of the fiscal strategy and the ensuing debt profile:

- Is there a risk of insolvency of the government or of the country?
- Is the servicing of foreign debt manageable without the sacrifice of essential imports or the building of arrears, and can the foreign debt be rolled over if need be?
- Is the overall servicing of debt manageable without impinging on essential public services or building of arrears, and can the overall debt be rolled over if need be?

In SVOEs, the foreign exchange criteria are the most sensitive. The indicators that warn of unsustainability corresponding to each criterion are:

- For the solvency criteria, the trend in the ratios of government debt and external debt to GDP;
- For the external debt criteria, the ratio of external debt servicing to foreign exchange inflows and the external debt maturity profile; and
- For the overall liquidity and rollover risk criteria, the ratio of interest payments to government revenue, and the overall debt maturity profile.

In SVOEs, the hard foreign currency constraint manifests itself in the fact that the external debt criteria cannot be alleviated by domestic monetary or fiscal policy (for example, by tightening fiscal policy). This distinguishes them from the domestic solvency, liquidity, or rollover risk criteria. A sufficient tightening of fiscal policy will reduce the ratio of debt to GDP, but it leaves the ratio of foreign debt service to foreign earnings unchanged, ceteris paribus. The primacy of the foreign exchange constraint is also reflected in the fact that SVOEs may experience economic crisis triggered by inability to service external debt when other indicators are relatively benign.[12]

---

12 At the time of the crisis in 1997, the Thai government debt-to-GDP ratio was 10 percent (Jason Furman and Joseph Stiglitz, "Economic Crises: Evidence and Insights from East Asia,"*Brookings Papers on Economic Activity,*29 (2):1–127, 1998). In the case of the Barbados crisis of 1991–92, the ratio was 50 percent (see Anton Belgrave, Jason LaCorbiniere, Delisle Worrell, and Denisa Applewhaite, "Fiscal Sustainability in an Open Economy with an Exchange Rate Peg," Central Bank of Barbados Economic Review, March 2011).

Competitiveness and growth

The foreign exchange constraint, and the fact that it cannot be relieved by an exchange rate depreciation, limits the overall rate of growth of the SVOE in the medium term to the maximum that can be supported by the foreign exchange surpluses of the tradable sectors. All production in the SVOE has a high import content, both tradables and nontradables. The nontradables, which earn no foreign exchange, use the tradables' surplus of foreign exchange over their own needs and the needs of consumers, to buy imported inputs. If that surplus is reduced for a year or two, it may be possible to finance the difference by foreign borrowing or running down reserves, but eventually the growth of nontradables will slow down if the tradable foreign surplus is not restored.

The foreign exchange constraint on growth may not be alleviated by an exchange rate depreciation because of the low substitutability of nontradables for tradables. The (often temporary) increase in the relative price of tradables that results from the depreciation provokes no switch of consumption from tradables to nontradables because education or health or other nontradables cannot be substituted for tourism or other tradables. The range of tradables in which there is competitive domestic production is very narrow, as previously noted, and therefore there is no significant scope for import substitution (or expansion of tradable output to meet local needs instead of exporting).[13] In cases where an exchange rate depreciation is seen to reduce the excess demand for foreign exchange in the SVOE, it will be observed that the real demand for imports has fallen because of the income effect of the depreciation, but there has been no substitution effect.[14] The depreciation makes imports more expensive, without creating any avenue for an increase in income, either in the production of tradables or nontradables, and therefore fewer imports can be afforded.

An exchange rate depreciation in an SVOE does not typically result in any increase in output, and may precipitate a contraction. The depreciation does not increase the country's competitiveness, even in cases where there is less than full pass through to the prices of 13 The latter would in any case be unhelpful, because it would not help to alleviate the foreign exchange constraint.

---

14 Depreciation is therefore an inferior tool for achieving what may be effected at lower inflationary costs by appropriate fiscal adjustment, at an unchanged exchange rate (DeLisle Worrell, Economic Policies in Small Open Economies: Prospects for the Caribbean, Commonwealth Secretariat, 1992, p. 53).

domestic goods and factor prices, if competitiveness is judged by market penetration, or, in this case, output growth. Conventional real effective exchange rate measures, which combine exchange rate changes and changes in relative prices at home and abroad, are indexes of a more limited concept of competition, where the least costly is the most competitive. What is more, they are not a good proxy of the offer price of domestic products. The SVOE sells tradables at the ruling international price, whether at home or abroad. It is only in the nontradable sector that producers may sell at prices that are not fully determined abroad. The ratio of tradable-to-nontradable prices is therefore the most useful proxy of price competitiveness in SVOEs.

Competitiveness for SVOEs is not about relative prices

Growth strategies for SVOEs are by necessity country specific, and depend on the production structure and composition of the foreign exchange sector, and the sources of the country's comparative advantage.[15] In a world of rapidly changing tastes and technology, where new products and new competition are constantly emerging, it is more likely that structural changes will drive the relative prices of nontradables than the other way around. In any case, a sustainable way to increase the relative prices of tradable goods, should that be deemed necessary, is through the use of fiscal policy.

Small states are different

SVOEs are more vulnerable to external shocks than larger economies simply because the external transactions coefficients are so much larger, on both the current and the capital and financial accounts. Small states may build resilience to excess volatility, and achieve levels of economic performance comparable to larger, less vulnerable economies, but building resilience comes at a cost. These issues have been thoroughly investigated by the World Bank, the Commonwealth Secretariat, and the University of Malta.[16]

SVOEs are also more limited than large economies in what they can do in response to an economic shock. There is little scope for 15 For example, see World Economic Forum, Global Competitiveness Report 2010–11, www.weform.org, the 12 pillars of competitiveness.

16 See Lino Briguglio, Gordon Cordina, and Ellawony Kisanga, Building the Economic Resilience of Small States, University of Malta and the Commonwealth Secretariat, 2006.

countercyclical fiscal policy, unless it can be financed by prudent foreign borrowing, because the ensuing increase in aggregate demand generates an excess demand for foreign exchange. Further, there are no possibilities for import substitution, through an exchange rate depreciation or any other means, and no way to boost exports of goods and services through price adjustment, since their prices are governed by the international market. Therefore, in contrast to large economies and closed economies (which, if small, are at subsistence levels of living), SVOEs have no way to respond to a shock that reduces output, other than to absorb the loss of real income.

The third important distinction of SVOEs has to do with the policy framework. A market-determined exchange rate anchor has proved to be a simple, credible, and effective framework for stabilization policy that delivers what is possible (equilibrium of external payments and the avoidance of balance of payments crises) and does not pretend to deliver what is not possible (growth in the face of declining demand for exports of goods and services, or containment of imported inflation). What is more, the exchange rate anchor can be maintained in the absence of sophisticated policy frameworks, so long as fiscal policy is sufficiently prudent.

In contrast, the popular monetary and inflation targeting frameworks have proved to be problematic for SVOEs. The studies of the predictability of monetary aggregates, and their relation to prices, must by now run into the thousands, but policy makers are still forced to shoot in the dark in determining the extent of monetary adjustment that is needed for achieving their targets. What is more, in SVOEs the open financial account often nullifies the thrust of monetary policy.[17] The inflation targeting framework faces a credibility problem in SVOEs: "core" inflation, which is the central bank's target, excludes food and fuel, which are imported and typically account for more than 50 percent of the consumer basket. It becomes immaterial if the central bank has achieved its target for "core" inflation, if the retail price index rises twice as fast.

---

17 See DeLisle Worrell, "Bank Behaviour and Monetary Policy in Small Open Economies with Reference to the Caribbean," Social and Economic Studies, 46 (2/3) (October): 59–74, 1997, http://www.jstor.org/discover/10.2307/27866137?uid=2129&uid=2&uid=70&uid=4&sid=21100909212171.

Conclusion

Small very open economies are different from large economies, in that they face a foreign exchange constraint that cannot be alleviated by depreciation of the real exchange rate or other policies. This constraint affects monetary, fiscal, and exchange rate policy including fiscal sustainability, debt management, and patterns of economic growth. With respect to monetary, fiscal, and exchange rate policies, the most accessible framework for such economies is an exchange rate anchor, where the foreign currency market is balanced by managing aggregate demand, using fiscal policy. This paper has attempted to explain, with respect to debt, that the most sensitive indicators of fiscal sustainability are the ratio of external debt service to foreign earnings, and the rollover risk on foreign currency loans. It has also argued that expansion in the small very open economy is sustainable only if led by the sectors that earn or save foreign exchange.

Group of Thirty Members 2012[18]

Paul A. Volcker
Chairman Emeritus, Group of Thirty
Former Chairman, President Barack Obama's Economic Recovery Advisory Board
Former Chairman, Board of Governors of the Federal Reserve System

Jacob A. Frenkel
Chairman of the Board of Trustees, Group of Thirty
Chairman, JPMorgan Chase International
Former Governor, Bank of Israel
Former Professor of Economics, University of Chicago
Former Counselor, Director of Research, International Monetary Fund

Jean-Claude Trichet
Chairman, Group of Thirty
Honorary Governor, Banque de France
Former President, European Central Bank
Former Governor, Banque de France

Geoffrey L. Bell
Executive Secretary, Group of Thirty
President, Geoffrey Bell & Company, Inc.

Leszek Balcerowicz
Professor, Warsaw School of Economics
Chairman of the Board, Bruegel
Former President, National Bank of Poland
Former Deputy Prime Minister and Minister of Finance, Poland

Mark Carney
Governor, Bank of Canada
Chairman, Financial Stability Board
Member, Board of Directors, Bank for International Settlements

Jaime Caruana
General Manager, Bank for International Settlements
Former Financial Counsellor, International Monetary Fund
Former Governor, Banco de España
Former Chairman, Basel Committee on Banking Supervision

Domingo Cavallo
Chairman and CEO, DFC Associates, LLC
Former Minister of Economy, Argentina

E. Gerald Corrigan
Managing Director, Goldman Sachs Group, Inc.
Former President, Federal Reserve Bank of New York

Guillermo de la Dehesa Romero
Director and Member of the Executive Committee, Grupo Santander
Former Deputy Managing Director, Banco de España
Former Secretary of State, Ministry of Economy and Finance, Spain

---

18 As of September 1, 2012.

Mario Draghi
President, European Central Bank
Member, Board of Directors, Bank for International Settlements
Former Governor, Banca d'Italia
Former Chairman, Financial Stability Board
Former Vice Chairman and Managing Director, Goldman Sachs International

William Dudley
President, Federal Reserve Bank of New York
Member, Board of Directors, Bank for International Settlements
Former Partner and Managing Director, Goldman Sachs and Company

Martin Feldstein
Professor of Economics, Harvard University
President Emeritus, National Bureau of Economic Research
Former Chairman, Council of Economic Advisers

Roger W. Ferguson, Jr.
President and CEO, TIAA-CREF
Former Chairman, Swiss Re America Holding Corporation
Former Vice Chairman, Board of Governors of the Federal Reserve System

Stanley Fischer
Governor, Bank of Israel
Former First Managing Director, International Monetary Fund

Arminio Fraga Neto
Founding Partner, Gávea Investimentos
Chairman of the Board, BM&F-Bovespa
Former Governor, Banco Central do Brasil

Gerd Häusler
Chief Executive Officer, Bayerische Landesbank
Member of the Board of Directors and Senior Advisor, RHJ International
Former Managing Director and Member of the Advisory Board, Lazard & Co.
Former Counselor and Director, International Monetary Fund
Former Managing Director, Dresdner Bank

Philipp Hildebrand
Senior Visiting Fellow at the Blavatnik School of Government, Oxford University
Former Chairman of the Governing Board, Swiss National Bank
Former Partner, Moore Capital Management

Mervyn King
Governor, Bank of England
Member, Board of Directors, Bank for International Settlements
Member of the Governing and General Councils, European Central Bank
Former Professor of Economics, London School of Economics

Paul Krugman
Professor of Economics, Woodrow Wilson School, Princeton University
Former Member, Council of Economic Advisors

Guillermo Ortiz
President and Chairman, Grupo Finaciero Banorte
Former Governor, Banco de México
Former Chairman of the Board, Bank for International Settlements
Former Secretary of Finance and Public Credit, Mexico

Raghuram G. Rajan
Professor of Economics, Chicago Booth School of Business
Economic Advisor to Prime Minister of India

Kenneth Rogoff
Thomas D. Cabot Professor of Public Policy and Economics, Harvard University
Former Chief Economist and Director of Research, IMF

Tharman Shanmugaratnam
Deputy Prime Minister & Minister for Finance & Manpower, Singapore
Chairman, Monetary Authority of Singapore
Chairman of International Monetary & Financial Committee, IMF
Former Managing Director, Monetary Authority of Singapore

Masaaki Shirakawa
Governor, Bank of Japan
Vice-Chairman, Board of Directors, Bank for International Settlements
Former Professor, Kyoto University School of Government

Lawrence H. Summers
Charles W. Eliot University Professor at Harvard University
Former Director, National Economics Council for President Barack Obama
Former President, Harvard University
Former Secretary of the Treasury

Lord Adair Turner
Chairman, Financial Services Authority
Member of the House of Lords, United Kingdom

David Walker
Non-executive Director, Barclays PLC
Senior Advisor, Morgan Stanley International, Inc.
Former Chairman, Morgan Stanley International, Inc.
Former Chairman, Securities and Investments Board, U.K.

Axel A. Weber
Chairman, UBS
Former Visiting Professor of Economics, Chicago Booth School of Business
Former President, Deutsche Bundesbank

Yutaka Yamaguchi
Former Deputy Governor, Bank of Japan
Former Chairman, Euro Currency Standing Commission

Ernesto Zedillo
Director, Yale Center for the Study of Globalization, Yale University
Former President of Mexico

Zhou Xiaochuan
Governor, People's Bank of China
Member, Board of Directors, Bank for International Settlements
Former President, China Construction Bank
Former Assistant Minister of Foreign Trade

SENIOR MEMBERS

Abdlatif Al-Hamad
Chairman, Arab Fund for Economic and Social Development
Former Minister of Finance and Minister of Planning, Kuwait

EMERITUS MEMBERS

Andrew Crockett
President, JPMorgan Chase International
Former General Manager, Bank for International Settlements

Jacques de Larosière
President, Eurofi
Conseiller, BNP Paribas
Former President, European Bank for Reconstruction and Development
Former Managing Director, International Monetary Fund
Former Governor, Banque de France

Richard A. Debs
Advisory Director, Morgan Stanley
Former President, Morgan Stanley International
Former COO, Federal Reserve Bank of New York

Gerhard Fels
Former Director, Institut der deutschen Wirtschaft

Toyoo Gyohten
President, Institute for International Monetary Affairs
Former Chairman, Bank of Tokyo

John G. Heimann
Senior Advisor, Financial Stability Institute
Former U.S. Comptroller of the Currency

Erik Hoffmeyer
Chairman, Politiken-Fonden
Former Chairman, Danmarks Nationalbank

Peter B. Kenen
Walker Professor of Economics & International Finance Emeritus, Princeton University
Former Senior Fellow in International Economics, Council on Foreign Relations

William McDonough
Former Vice Chairman, Bank of America/Merrill Lynch
Former Chairman, Public Company Accounting Oversight Board
Former President, Federal Reserve Bank of New York

Shijuro Ogata
Deputy Chairman, Pacific Asia Region, the Trilateral Commission
Former Deputy Governor, Bank of Japan
Former Deputy Governor, Japan Development Bank

Sylvia Ostry
Distinguished Research Fellow, Munk Centre for International Studies, Toronto
Former Ambassador for Trade Negotiations, Canada
Former Head, OECD Economics and Statistics Department

William R. Rhodes
President and CEO, William R. Rhodes Global Advisors
Senior Advisor, Citigroup
Former Senior Vice Chairman, Citigroup

Ernest Stern
Partner and Senior Advisor, The Rohatyn Group
Former Managing Director, JPMorgan Chase
Former Managing Director, World Bank

Marina v N. Whitman
Professor of Business Administration & Public Policy, University of Michigan
Former Member, Council of Economic Advisors

Group of Thirty Publications since 1990

REPORTS

Sharing the Gains from Trade: Reviving the Doha
Study Group Report. 2004

Key Issues in Sovereign Debt Restructuring
Study Group Report. 2002

Reducing the Risks of International Insolvency
A Compendium of Work in Progress. 2000

Collapse: The Venezuelan Banking Crisis of '94
Ruth de Krivoy. 2000

The Evolving Corporation: Global Imperatives and National Responses
Study Group Report. 1999

International Insolvencies in the Financial Sector
Study Group Report. 1998

Global Institutions, National Supervision and Systemic Risk
Study Group on Supervision and Regulation. 1997

Latin American Capital Flows: Living with Volatility
Latin American Capital Flows Study Group. 1994

Defining the Roles of Accountants, Bankers and Regulators in the United States
Study Group on Accountants, Bankers and Regulators. 1994

EMU after Maastricht
Peter B. Kenen. 1992

Sea Changes in Latin America
Pedro Aspe, Andres Bianchi, and Domingo Cavallo, with discussion by S.T. Beza and William Rhodes. 1992

The Summit Process and Collective Security: Future Responsibility Sharing
The Summit Reform Study Group. 1991

Financing Eastern Europe
Richard A. Debs, Harvey Shapiro, and Charles Taylor. 1991

The Risks Facing the World Economy
The Risks Facing the World Economy Study Group. 1991

THE WILLIAM TAYLOR MEMORIAL LECTURES

Three Years Later: Unfinished Business in Financial Reform
Paul A. Volcker. 2011

It's Not Over 'Til It's Over: Leadership and Financial Regulation
Thomas M. Hoenig. 2010

The Credit Crisis: The Quest for Stability and Reform
E. Gerald Corrigan. 2008

Lessons Learned from the 2008 Financial Crisis
Eugene A. Ludwig. 2008

Two Cheers for Financial Stability
Howard Davies. 2006

Implications of Basel II for Emerging Market Countries
Stanley Fischer. 2003

Issues in Corporate Governance
William J. McDonough. 2003

Post Crisis Asia: The Way Forward
Lee Hsien Loong. 2001

Licensing Banks: Still Necessary?
Tommaso Padoa-Schioppa. 2000

Banking Supervision and Financial Stability
Andrew Crockett. 1998

Global Risk Management
Ulrich Cartellieri and Alan Greenspan. 1996

The Financial Disruptions of the 1980s: A Central Banker Looks Back
E. Gerald Corrigan. 1993

SPECIAL REPORTS

Enhancing Financial Stability and Resilience:
Macroprudential Policy, Tools, and Systems for the Future
Macroprudential Policy Working Group. 2010

The Reform of the International Monetary Fund
IMF Reform Working Group. 2009

Financial Reform: A Framework for Financial Stability
Financial Reform Working Group. 2009

The Structure of Financial Supervision:
Approaches and Challenges in a Global Marketplace
Financial Regulatory Systems Working Group. 2008

Global Clearing and Settlement: Final Monitoring Report
Global Monitoring Committee. 2006

Reinsurance and International Financial Markets
Reinsurance Study Group. 2006

Enhancing Public Confidence in Financial Reporting
Steering & Working Committees on Accounting. 2004

Global Clearing and Settlement: A Plan of Action
Steering & Working Committees of Global Clearing & Settlements Study. 2003

Derivatives: Practices and Principles:
Follow-up Surveys of Industry Practice

Global Derivatives Study Group. 1994
Derivatives: Practices and Principles, Appendix III: Survey of Industry Practice
Global Derivatives Study Group. 1994

Derivatives: Practices and Principles, Appendix II: Legal Enforceability: Survey of Nine Jurisdictions
Global Derivatives Study Group. 1993

Derivatives: Practices and Principles, Appendix I: Working Papers
Global Derivatives Study Group. 1993

Derivatives: Practices and Principles
Global Derivatives Study Group. 1993

Clearance and Settlement Systems: Status Reports, Autumn 1992
Various Authors. 1992

Clearance and Settlement Systems: Status Reports, Year-End 1990
Various Authors. 1991

Conference on Clearance and Settlement Systems. London, March 1990: Speeches
Various Authors. 1990

Clearance and Settlement Systems: Status Reports, Spring 1990
Various Authors. 1990

OCCASIONAL PAPERS

84. The Long-term Outlook for the European Project and the Single Currency
Jacques de Larosière. 2012

83. Macroprudential Policy: Addressing the Things We Don't Know
Alastair Clark and Andrew Large. 2011

82. The 2008 Financial Crisis and Its Aftermath: Addressing the Next Debt Challenge
Thomas A. Russo and Aaron J. Katzel. 2011

81. Regulatory Reforms and Remaining Challenges
Mark Carney, Paul Tucker, Philipp Hildebrand, Jacques de Larosière, William Dudley, Adair Turner, and Roger W. Ferguson, Jr. 2011

80. 12 Market and Government Failures Leading to the 2008–09 Financial Crisis
Guillermo de la Dehesa. 2010

79. Lessons Learned from Previous Banking Crises: Sweden, Japan, Spain, and Mexico
Stefan Ingves, Goran Lind, Masaaki Shirakawa, Jaime Caruana, and Guillermo Ortiz Martinez. 2009

78. The G30 at Thirty
Peter Kenen. 2008

77. Distorting the Micro to Embellish the Macro: The Case of Argentina
Domingo Cavallo and Joaquin Cottani. 2008

76. Credit Crunch: Where Do We Stand?
Thomas A. Russo. 2008

75. Banking, Financial, and Regulatory Reform
Liu Mingkang, Roger Ferguson, and Guillermo Ortiz Martinez. 2007

74. The Achievements and Challenges of European Union Financial Integration and its Implications for the United States
Jacques de Larosière. 2007

73. Nine Common Misconceptions about Competitiveness and Globalization
Guillermo de la Dehesa. 2007

72. International Currencies and National Monetary Policies
Barry Eichengreen. 2006

71. The International Role of the Dollar and Trade Balance Adjustment
Linda Goldberg and Cédric Tille. 2006

70. The Critical Mission of the European Stability and Growth Pact
Jacques de Larosière. 2005

69. Is it Possible to Preserve the European Social Model?
Guillermo de la Dehesa. 2005

68. External Transparency in Trade Policy
Sylvia Ostry. 2004

67. American Capitalism and Global Convergence
Marina V.N. Whitman. 2003

66. Enron et al.: Market Forces in Disarray
Jaime Caruana, Andrew Crockett, Douglas Flint, Trevor Harris, and Tom Jones. 2002

65. Venture Capital in the United States and Europe
Guillermo de la Dehesa. 2002

64. Explaining the Euro to a Washington Audience
Tommaso Padoa-Schioppa. 2001

63. Exchange Rate Regimes: Some Lessons from Postwar Europe
Charles Wyplosz. 2000

62. Decisionmaking for European Economic and Monetary Union
Erik Hoffmeyer. 2000

61. Charting a Course for the Multilateral Trading System: The Seattle Ministerial Meeting and Beyond
Ernest Preeg. 1999

60. Exchange Rate Arrangements for the Emerging Market Economies
Felipe Larraín and Andrés Velasco. 1999

59. G3 Exchange Rate Relationships: A Recap of the Record and a Review of Proposals for Change
Richard Clarida. 1999

58. Real Estate Booms and Banking Busts: An International Perspective
Richard Herring and Susan Wachter. 1999

57. The Future of Global Financial Regulation
Sir Andrew Large. 1998

56. Reinforcing the WTO
Sylvia Ostry. 1998

55. Japan: The Road to Recovery
Akio Mikuni. 1998

54. Financial Services in the Uruguay Round and the WTO
Sydney J. Key. 1997

53. A New Regime for Foreign Direct Investment
Sylvia Ostry. 1997

52. Derivatives and Monetary Policy
Gerd Häusler. 1996

51. The Reform of Wholesale Payment Systems and Impact on Financial Markets
David Folkerts-Landau, Peter Garber, and Dirk Schoenmaker. 1996

50. EMU Prospects
Guillermo de la Dehesa and Peter B. Kenen. 1995

49. New Dimensions of Market Access
Sylvia Ostry. 1995

48. Thirty Years in Central Banking
Erik Hoffmeyer. 1994

47. Capital, Asset Risk and Bank Failure
Linda M. Hooks. 1994

46. In Search of a Level Playing Field: The Implementation of the Basle Capital Accord in Japan and the United States
Hal S. Scott and Shinsaku Iwahara. 1994

45. The Impact of Trade on OECD Labor Markets
Robert Z. Lawrence. 1994

44. Global Derivatives: Public Sector Responses
James A. Leach, William J. McDonough, David W. Mullins, and Brian Quinn. 1993

43. The Ten Commandments of Systemic Reform
Vaclav Klaus. 1993

42. Tripolarism: Regional and Global Economic Cooperation
Tommaso Padoa-Schioppa. 1993

41. The Threat of Managed Trade to Transforming Economies
Sylvia Ostry. 1993

40. The New Trade Agenda
Geza Feketekuty. 1992

39. EMU and the Regions
Guillermo de la Dehesa and Paul Krugman. 1992

38. Why Now? Change and Turmoil in U.S. Banking
Lawrence J. White. 1992

37. Are Foreign-owned Subsidiaries Good for the United States?
Raymond Vernon. 1992

36. The Economic Transformation of East Germany: Some Preliminary Lessons
Gerhard Fels and Claus Schnabel. 1991

35. International Trade in Banking Services: A Conceptual Framework
Sydney J. Key and Hal S. Scott. 1991

34. Privatization in Eastern and Central Europe
Guillermo de la Dehesa. 1991

33. Foreign Direct Investment: The Neglected Twin of Trade
DeAnne Julius. 1991

32. Interdependence of Capital Markets and Policy Implications
Stephen H. Axilrod. 1990

31. Two Views of German Reunification
Hans Tietmeyer and Wilfried Guth. 1990

30. Europe in the Nineties: Problems and Aspirations
Wilfried Guth. 1990

29. Implications of Increasing Corporate Indebtedness for Monetary Policy
Benjamin M. Friedman. 1990

28. Financial and Monetary Integration in Europe: 1990, 1992 and Beyond
Tommaso Padoa-Schioppa. 1990

Group of Thirty

Policies for Stabilization and Growth in Small Very Open Economies

DeLisle Worrell

GROUP OF THIRTY
1726 M Street, N.W., Suite 200
Washington, DC 20036
ISBN 1-56708-158-4